

The Hidden History of RACIAL DISPARITIES in La Crosse and Wisconsin

How did Wisconsin go from being the leading state in protecting fugitive slaves pre-Civil War to being one of most hazardous places in which to raise a black child today?

@ 10:00 am - Noon

Oral Historian Reggie Jackson

Reggie Jackson, the Head Griot (oral historian) of America's Black Holocaust Museum in Milwaukee, helps audiences explore two questions: How did we get here – and what can we do to change the racial disparities that impede the well-being of Wisconsin's African American citizens?

Mr. Jackson presents a fascinating look at the national, state and local policies and customs that have led to current conditions. A lively and extended Q & A with the audience follows his presentations, which have been packing houses around the state.
