EXECUTIVE BRANCH

A PROFILE OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH

Structure of the Executive Branch

The structure of Wisconsin state government is based on a separation of powers among the legislative, executive and judicial branches. The legislative branch sets broad policy objectives and establishes the general structures and regulations for carrying out the policies. The executive branch supervises the day-to-day administration of these programs and policies, while the judicial branch is responsible for adjudicating any conflicts that may arise from the interpretation or application of the laws.

Government Has Become Increasingly Complex. The governor, as head of the executive branch, is constitutionally required to “take care that the laws be faithfully executed”. This appeared to be a relatively simple task when the state constitution was ratified in 1848. In Article V, the people of Wisconsin provided for the election of a governor and a lieutenant governor who would become acting governor in the event of a vacancy in the governor’s office. Originally, the lieutenant governor was also the presiding officer of the senate, so there was a built-in liaison between the executive and legislative branches.

In Article VI, the constitution provided for 3 additional elected officers to assist in administering the laws of the new state. The secretary of state was authorized by the first session of the legislature in 1848 to keep official records, including enrolled laws and various state papers, and to act as state auditor to supervise the state’s fiscal concerns by examining the treasurer’s books and preparing budget projections for the legislature. The state treasurer was given responsibility for receiving all money and tax collections paid into the state treasury and paying out only those amounts authorized by the legislature for the operation of state government. The attorney general was to provide legal advice to the legislature and other constitutional officers and represent the state in legal matters tried in the courts of this state, other states and the federal government.

The sixth officer, created by Article X of the constitution, was the state superintendent of public instruction. The first legislature gave the superintendent very specific duties, including the mandate to travel throughout the state inspecting common schools and advocating good public school systems to parents and teachers. The state superintendent was to recommend texts, take a census of school age children, collect statistics on existing schools and determine the apportionment of school aids. Many of these duties continue today.

The simplicity of administering state government in the early years is illustrated by the fact that total expenditures for 1848 government operations were only $13,472, and that included the expenses of the legislature and circuit courts. As prescribed by the constitution and state law, the salaries of all 6 constitutional officers totaled $5,050 that year. (The lieutenant governor did not receive a salary, but he was given a double legislative per diem.)

Over a century later, the Wisconsin Committee on the Reorganization of the Executive Branch in its report to the 1967 Legislature concluded that state government could no longer be neatly divided into precise “legislative”, “executive” and “judicial” domains. In many instances the subjects of legislation had become so technically complex that the legislature found it necessary to grant “rule-making” authority to the administrative agencies. The courts had also encountered a staggering load of technical detail and had come to depend on administrative agencies to use their “quasi-judicial” powers to assist the judicial branch.

1967 Reorganization. By the time the reorganization committee ended its studies in January 1967, it had identified 85 state agencies within the executive branch of Wisconsin state government. Since the Wisconsin Constitution vests the executive power in the governor, the governor holds the ultimate responsibility for state administration. The proliferation of state agencies over the years, however, had made it increasingly difficult for a governor to exercise effective executive control. In fact, many of the agencies had no direct relationship to the governor. The purpose of reorganization was to integrate agencies on a functional basis and make them responsive to the elected chief executive. Based on the committee's recommendations, Chapter 75, Laws of 1967, drastically reduced the number of executive agencies from 85 to 32. The reorganized structure included 4 constitutional offices, 14 operating departments (including the Department of Justice and the Department of Public Instruction, headed by the 2 other constitutional officers) and 14 independent agencies.

Like everything else, state government does not remain static. Since the 1967 reorganization, the legislature has created new state agencies, while abolishing or consolidating others. This process of periodically reevaluating structure and function continued when the 1995 Legislature created 2 new departments, one of which encompassed 3 formerly independent agencies; ordered that the secretaries of 2 departments be appointed by the governor (with senate consent) rather than by their boards; and shifted several critical programs from one agency to another.

Constitutional Officers. The constitutional officers are elected by the voters in statewide elections. Their number has remained constant since the adoption of the constitution in 1848. They include the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, and state treasurer, all of whom head offices, and the attorney general and state superintendent of public instruction, who head departments. Originally, the term of office for all constitutional officers was 2 years, but since the 1970 elections, following amendment of the constitution, their terms have been 4 years. All the officers, except the state superintendent, are elected on partisan ballots in the fall elections of the even-numbered years at the midpoint between presidential elections. Originally a partisan officer, the state superintendent is now elected on a nonpartisan ballot in the April election.

Departments. The term "department" is used to designate a principal administrative agency within the executive branch. It is not used for the independent agencies, which frequently have quasi-judicial functions. Within a department, the major subunit is the division, which is headed by an administrator. Each division, in turn, is divided into bureaus, headed by directors. Bureaus may include sections, headed by chiefs, and smaller units, headed by supervisors. There currently are 18 departments in the executive branch.

Wisconsin Administrative Departments

|--|--------------------------|
| Administration | Military Affairs |
| Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection | Natural Resources |
| Commerce | Public Instruction |
| Corrections | Regulation and Licensing |
| Employe Trust Funds | Revenue |
| Employment Relations | Tourism |
| Financial Institutions | Transportation |
| Health and Family Services | Veterans Affairs |
| Justice | Workforce Development |

In the majority of cases, the departments are headed by a secretary appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate. Only the Department of Employee Trust Funds and the Department of Veterans Affairs are headed by boards that select the secretary. When administrators are personally chosen by and serve at the pleasure of the governor, they usually work in close cooperation with the chief executive.

Debate about whether department heads should be directly appointed by the governor continues. Public administration theory has long held that a governor can, in fact, be the chief executive only if the office has the authority to hold department heads directly accountable. On the other hand, the original purpose of a board was to insulate a department from politics, thereby enabling its head and staff to develop expertise and a sense of professionalism.

Independent Agencies. In addition to constitutional offices and administrative departments, there are 13 units of the executive branch that have been specifically designated as independent agencies.

Independent Executive Agencies

|----------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Educational Communications Board | Personnel Commission |
| Elections Board | Public Service Commission |
| Employment Relations Commission | State Historical Society of Wisconsin |
| Ethics Board | State Public Defender Board |
| Gaming Board | Technical College System Board |
| Insurance Commission | University of Wisconsin System |
| Investment Board | |

Although the independent agencies are usually headed by boards or multiple commissioners, most of these officials are appointed by the governor with advice and consent of the senate, which serves to strengthen executive control of these units.

Authorities. In some instances, the legislature has decided to create corporate public bodies, known as “authorities”, for specific purposes. Although they are agencies of the state, the authorities operate outside the regular structure of government and are intended to be financially self-sufficient. There currently are 4 authorities operating in Wisconsin – the Wisconsin Housing and Economic Development Authority (WHEDA), the Wisconsin Health and Educational Facilities Authority (WHEFA), the University of Wisconsin Hospital and Clinics Authority and the World Dairy Center Authority. The World Dairy Center Authority is supported by private funds, but WHEDA, WHEFA and UW Hospital and Clinics Authority are authorized to issue bonds. Most authority members are appointed by the governor with advice and consent of the senate, but some are chosen from the legislature or serve as ex officio members.

Nonprofit Corporation. In 1985, the legislature created the Bradley Center Sports and Entertainment Corporation, which operates the Bradley Center in Milwaukee. The corporation is headed by a 9-member board of directors appointed by the governor, 6 with advice and consent of the senate and 3 as nominees of the Bradley Family Foundation, Inc. The directors serve 7-year terms.

Boards, Councils and Committees. Many departments and agencies have subordinate boards, councils and committees to carry out specific tasks or to act in an advisory capacity. The 1967 reorganization act standardized the nomenclature and spelled out the differences in these units. A board is a “part-time body functioning as the policy-making unit for a department or independent agency or a part-time body with policy-making or quasi-judicial powers”. An examining board is a “part-time body which sets standards of professional competence and conduct for the profession under its supervision, prepares, conducts and grades the examinations of prospective new practitioners, grants licenses, investigates complaints of alleged unprofessional conduct and performs other functions assigned to it by law”. A council is defined as a “part-time body appointed to function on a continuing basis for the study, and recommendation of solutions and policy alternatives, of the problems arising in a specified functional area of state government”. A committee is considered to be a “part-time body appointed to study a specific problem and to recommend a solution or policy alternative with respect to that problem, and intended to terminate on the completion of its assignment”.

Boards are always specifically created by statute. Councils and committees may be created by law, but “[b]ecause of their temporary nature, committees shall be created by session law rather than by statute”. Each agency head may also create and appoint such councils or committees as the operation of the department or independent agency requires.

Attached Units. Under the 1967 reorganization, certain boards, commissions and councils were attached to departments or independent agencies for administrative purposes only. The larger agencies may assist them with various services, such as budgeting and program coordination. The units are sometimes referred to by the statutory section number that defines them as “15.03 units”. They continue to be distinct units and to exercise their statutory powers independently of the department or independent agency to which they are attached. There currently are 63 of these units: 42 boards, 4 commissions, 9 councils, 5 divisions and 3 offices.

Classified Service. One of the outstanding characteristics of Wisconsin state government is the merit system it applies to state employees. Wisconsin’s civil service, which is called “classified service”, is designed to ensure that the most qualified person is hired for the job, based on test results and experience, rather than political affiliation. Wisconsin was one of the earliest states to adopt such a system, doing so in 1905, and its system was considered one of the strongest because it encompassed the major portion of state personnel.

Since the 1967 reorganization of the executive branch, the trend has been to make top agency officials, including deputy secretaries, executive assistants and division administrators, appointed unclassified positions. Despite this change at the top levels of civil service, most state employees are hired and promoted through the classified service on the basis of merit.

Salaries. All positions in the classified service are categorized so that those involving similar duties, responsibilities and qualifications are paid on the same basis. The Department of Employment Relations is directed to apply the principle of equal pay for work of equivalent skills and responsibilities when assigning a classification to a pay range. Each biennium, the department establishes the compensation plan of classifications and related salary ranges for those classified employees not covered by collective bargaining agreements, subject to modification by the legislature's Joint Committee on Employment Relations. The governor may veto the committee's actions, although the vote of 6 committee members can override a veto. Some provisions of the compensation plan, as approved by the committee, may require changes in existing law, in which case they must be presented in bill form to the legislature for enactment before implementation.

State employees may join labor unions and engage in collective bargaining, but they are prohibited by state law from striking. Collectively bargained agreements, negotiated between the Department of Employment Relations and labor organizations, are submitted to the Joint Committee on Employment Relations. If approved, they are submitted to the legislature in bill form for approval of salaries, fringe benefits and other changes in the law. If the committee or legislature does not approve the proposed agreement, it is returned for renegotiation.

Under the law, agency heads are systematically placed in one of 10 groups, and each group is assigned a salary range. The salary range for each group is determined in the same manner as for the positions in the classified service. Salaries of elected constitutional officers, including the legislature, are set at varying points of these ranges.

Number of State Employees. The increasing size and complexity of state government is reflected in the number of employees. To illustrate this, a total of 1,924 people worked for Wisconsin state government in 1906. By contrast, on September 30, 1996, the number of state employees totaled 69,884, of whom 37,466 were permanent classified; 19,201 were unclassified (primarily teaching and academic staff of the University of Wisconsin System); 5,650 were UW graduate assistants and other employees; and 6,738 were limited term, seasonal or project employees.

State Government's Physical Plant. The first capitol in Madison was built during the Wisconsin Territory days at a cost of more than $60,000. Construction began in 1837 but was not completed until 1845. The building, which served as the first state capitol, was demolished in 1863 to make way for a larger second capitol that was completed in 1866. When the second state capitol was extensively damaged by fire in 1904, construction of the current capitol began. The present capitol, which was completed in 1917, at a cost of $7,203,826.35, is now undergoing extensive restoration and renovation to prepare it for the 21st century.

Today, the agencies of state government in Madison are housed in the capitol and various state-owned office buildings, with additional space leased from private landlords. There are also state office buildings in Eau Claire, Green Bay, La Crosse, Milwaukee, Waukesha and Wisconsin Rapids, plus district offices maintained throughout the state for the field units of many of the operating departments.

Besides its office buildings, the state owns or maintains a variety of educational, correctional and mental institutions across Wisconsin. The University of Wisconsin System operates 13 degree-granting institutions and 13 two-year centers that feature freshman-sophomore instruction.

The state's correctional facilities, under the direction of the Department of Corrections, include 4 maximum security prisons, 5 medium security prisons, one minimum security institution, a prison for women and 17 correctional centers. The department also operates Ethan Allen School at Wales and Lincoln Hills School at Irma for male juveniles and Southern Oaks Girls School at Union Grove.

Through the Department of Health and Family Services, the state operates 3 mental health institutions at Madison, Winnebago and Oshkosh, and 3 centers for the developmentally disabled at Madison, Chippewa Falls and Union Grove.

The Department of Public Instruction maintains a school that offers special training to visually handicapped students at Janesville and a similar special school for the hearing impaired at Delavan. The Wisconsin Veterans Home at King in Waupaca County is operated by the state to serve eligible Wisconsin veterans and qualifying spouses.

Functions of the Executive Branch

Governor and Lieutenant Governor. The governor, as Wisconsin's chief executive officer, represents all the people of the state. Because of this, the Office of the Governor is the focal point for receiving complaints and suggestions about state affairs. In addition, at speaking engagements and public appearances around the state, the chief executive learns of current problems and, in turn, informs the people about current state actions. Administratively, the governor exercises authority through the power of appointment, consultation with department heads, and execution of the executive budget. The governor plays a key role in the legislative process through the biennial budget, which is submitted to the legislature in the form of a bill. Other opportunities to influence legislative action arise in the chief executive's state of the state message and special messages to the legislature about topics of urgent concern. The governor monitors and speaks on other proposals before the legislature and can shape the legislative process through the power to veto bills, to call special sessions of the legislature, and to appoint numerous committees or task forces to study state problems and make recommendations for changes in the law.

Based on a 1979 amendment, the constitution provides that if the incumbent governor dies, resigns or is removed from office, the lieutenant governor becomes governor for the unexpired term. The lieutenant governor serves only as "acting governor" when the governor is impeached, incapacitated or absent from the state.

Commerce. Although the U.S. Constitution specifically delegates to Congress the regulation of interstate commerce, each state regulates intrastate commerce within its borders. The definitions of interstate and intrastate commerce overlap at times, and over the years the U.S. Supreme Court has greatly broadened the meaning of the "commerce clause" in the federal constitution. Despite this broad interpretation, the states continue to exercise considerable authority over commerce.

Commerce involves trade in goods, services and commercial paper, as well as transportation and communication, so the state's involvement in regulation of commerce is broad. The state's primary objective is to protect the public as consumers of goods and services and as participants in financial transactions. Wisconsin state government is also interested in maintaining a stable, orderly market for carrying out commercial activities and for promoting the state's economic development.

One aspect of consumer protection is the inspection of raw products and the conditions under which they are produced. The state inspects cattle for infectious diseases, conducts research in animal and plant diseases, regulates the use of pesticides, grades fruits and vegetables for marketing, and sets standards for processed food. Explicit standards are set by law or in the administrative rules promulgated by the Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection. The department is concerned not only with the conditions of growing and processing food but also with fair trade practices.

Another important aspect of consumer protection is the licensing of various trades and professions. Generally, there is concern that individuals working in certain professions must achieve specific levels of training and proficiency before they offer their services to the public at large. Examples include those whose professions affect public health, such as doctors and nurses, or public safety, such as architects and engineers. The Department of Regulation and Licensing serves a variety of examining boards associated with various trades and professions and directly regulates certain types of professional activity.

The state protects consumers by maintaining an orderly market in which the public can conduct business. State activities include specifying methods of fair competition, regulating rates for public utilities, setting standards for the operation of financial institutions, regulating gambling and regulating the sale of securities and insurance. The Department of Financial Institutions regulates banks, savings institutions, credit unions and the sale of securities. The department also registers trademarks, corporations and other organizations and files Uniform Commercial Code documents. The Office of the Commissioner of Insurance regulates the sale of insurance. The Public Service Commission regulates public utility rates and services. The Gaming Board regulates charitable gambling and oversees gaming compacts between Indian tribes and the state. The Department of Revenue administers the Wisconsin Lottery.

The state is concerned with promoting economic development. The Department of Commerce provides assistance to communities and small businesses, promotes international trade, and recommends private and public sector programs to further long-term growth. The Wisconsin Development Fund awards grants or loans to fund technical research, labor training programs and other major economic development projects that promise to create jobs and increase capital investment. The Department of Tourism promotes Wisconsin's tourist attractions.

In the interests of public safety and welfare, the state enforces laws that regulate public and private buildings. The Department of Commerce enforces dwelling codes, reviews construction plans for new buildings inspects subsystems that serve buildings, and performs training and consulting services for the building industry.

Education. Wisconsin officially recognized the importance of education in a democratic society at statehood in the 1848 Wisconsin Constitution that provided for the establishment of local schools and required that education be free to all children in the state. The constitution further directed the legislature to establish a state university at Madison and colleges throughout the state as needed.

Wisconsin's system of public schools now educates over one million students each year. In 1996-97, there were 879,977 students in the public elementary and secondary schools. The 1996 fall enrollment in the University of Wisconsin System reached 149,330; the Technical College System's associate degree programs enrolled 98,527 students in the fall of 1995.

Wisconsin relies on 426 local school districts to administer its elementary and secondary programs. Twelve cooperative educational service agencies, known as "CESAs", furnish support activities to the local districts on a regional basis, and the Department of Public Instruction, headed by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, a nonpartisan constitutional officer, provides supervision and consultation for the districts.

In 1970 the entire state was divided into 16 vocational, technical and adult education districts. These districts, renamed technical college districts, are each supervised by a district board that has taxing power. At the state level, the Technical College System Board supervises the districts.

At the collegiate level, all state financed institutions of higher education are integrated into a single University of Wisconsin System. The system's 2 largest campuses at Madison (1996-97 enrollment – 39,826) and Milwaukee (1996-97 enrollment – 21,877) offer programs leading to doctoral degrees. Eleven other degree-granting institutions provide 4-year courses of baccalaureate study, and 13 UW Center campuses provide 2-year courses of study. State funding also supports Wisconsin residents enrolled at the Medical College of Wisconsin, Inc. (formerly the Medical School of Marquette University).

Three other state agencies perform educational functions – the Higher Educational Aids Council, the Educational Communications Board and the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. The council administers federal and state student financial assistance programs. The board operates the state's networks for educational radio and educational television. The historical society maintains the state historical library, museum and various historic sites.

Environmental Resources. From a wilderness inhabited by 305,391 people in 1850, the state has evolved into a complex society with a 1996 population officially estimated at 5,142,999. Most of Wisconsin is not densely populated, and the state has a comparatively large amount of open space. However, population growth, improved living standards and industrial development have increased environmental pollution.

Once pioneers could come to a wilderness, cut the forests, clear the land, and hunt and fish with little thought of damage to the soil, streams or wildlife. Now these resources must be protected from destruction or extinction. The Department of Natural Resources administers numerous programs that control water quality, air pollution and solid waste management. Under state regulations, municipalities and industries cannot dump untreated sewage or industrial wastes into surface waters; smokestacks and automobiles must meet air pollution limits; farmers are encouraged to preserve soil and groundwater quality; and solid waste disposal facilities must meet construction and operation standards. The state promotes recreational and educational opportunities through state parks, forests and natural areas. It also regulates hunting and fishing to protect fish and wildlife resources and manages other programs designed to conserve and restore endangered and threatened species.

The Department of Transportation also administers a variety of programs related to environmental resources. The highways that crisscross the state have a major impact on land use and people's lifestyles. Urban freeways and interstate highways greatly affect the use and development of surrounding land. They determine where people live, work and play. When state government plans the location and financing of highways and roads, it must carefully consider both short- and long-range consequences.

The state's highway system consists of interstate highways, state highways, county trunk highways, town roads, city and village streets, and park and forest roads. The state is concerned not only with building and maintaining adequate roads to meet demands, but also with providing for the safety of people using those roads. In 1996, more than 4.2 million vehicles were registered in Wisconsin, and more than 3.7 million residents were licensed to drive. With 759 traffic fatalities in that same year, and comparable figures in prior years, traffic safety is a constant concern.

The department must ensure that licensed drivers know the laws, are physically fit to drive, and have the required driving skills. It keeps track of drivers' records and can suspend the licenses of those who prove hazardous to themselves or others. It oversees highway construction and maintenance, highway patrol, and enforcement of driver and vehicle standards. The department is also involved in developing aviation and airports in Wisconsin and with promoting passenger mass transit and rail transportation.

Human Relations and Resources. Besides protecting the environment, the state must also protect its citizens directly. Population growth that affects the quality of land, water and air resources has an increasingly complex effect on people themselves and their relationships to each other and their government. The inhabitants of a state are its prime resource, and government must ensure their general welfare.

In the state's early days, public health was primarily concerned with preventing the spread of communicable diseases. Today, the work of the Department of Health and Family Services includes disease prevention and detection, health education programs, and maintenance of institutions for the care and treatment of the mentally handicapped or mentally ill. Records of birth, marriage, divorce and death are collected and used to identify trends and potential problems. The department is also responsible for a broad range of social services for the aged, the handicapped and children.

As a worker, the individual comes in contact with the state in many ways. Minimum wages and maximum hours are set by law. If a worker is injured on the job, state worker's compensation may be available; unemployment compensation helps a worker faced with job loss. If a worker is seeking a job, the state (in partnership with the federal government) provides a job service to help the individual find work or to acquire the skills necessary for employment. If a worker cannot obtain a job and suspects discrimination because of age, race, creed, color, handicap, marital status, sex, national origin, ancestry, sexual orientation, or arrest or conviction record, the state may investigate the matter. The state's agent in protecting and assisting workers is the Department of Workforce Development. The department also provides training and other services to help welfare recipients join the labor market under the state's W-2 program and provides employment and assistance to rehabilitate the handicapped. The Employment Relations Commission mediates or arbitrates labor disputes between workers and their employers.

The Department of Veterans Affairs has loan programs to help eligible veterans acquire a home, business or education, and it provides personal and medical care for eligible elderly veterans and their spouses at the Wisconsin Veterans Home at King.

The state must also protect its citizens from society's lawless elements by maintaining stability and order. Law enforcement is largely a local matter, but the Department of Corrections is responsible for segregating convicted adult and juvenile offenders in its penal institutions and rehabilitating them for eventual return to society. The Office of the State Public Defender represents indigents in trial and postconviction legal proceedings. The Department of Justice furnishes legal services to state agencies and technical assistance and training to local law enforcement agencies. It also enforces state laws against gambling, arson, prostitution and narcotic drugs.

The state provides an armed military force, the Wisconsin National Guard, to protect the populace in times of state or national emergency, whether natural or human caused, and to supplement the federal armed forces in time of war. These activities come under the jurisdiction of the Department of Military Affairs.

General Executive Functions. The services described so far are direct services to the public. In order for the state to perform these functions, it must also perform certain "staff" functions. The state has to have general departments that oversee the hiring of agency personnel and provide space, equipment, salaries and a retirement system for them. It must levy and collect taxes to support its activities, manage these state funds and ensure that they are spent according to law. It must evaluate each department's operations to assure that the department can perform its assigned tasks and prepare for future needs.

Some agencies are designed to perform staff functions almost exclusively. The Department of Administration, for example, is called the state's "housekeeping" department. Its duties include state budgeting, preauditing, engineering and facilities management, state planning, and data processing. The Department of Employment Relations operates the state's civil service system and is assisted by the Personnel Commission. The Department of Revenue collects taxes levied by state law, distributes part of that revenue to local units of government and calculates the equalized value of the property that has been assessed by local government.

The Department of Employee Trust Funds manages the state's retirement systems and the employee insurance programs that cover state and local government workers. At any one time, the state must have large sums of money in its employee trust funds to meet its obligations. The Investment Board invests these funds in stocks, bonds and real estate in order to earn the maximum amount of interest possible until the state needs to use the funds. The Office of the State Treasurer processes the receipt and disbursement of these and other state moneys.

The Office of the Secretary of State handles general executive duties, such as keeping various state records and affixing the state seal on certain records. The Elections Board oversees the state's election processes, monitors campaign expenditures and keeps election records. The Ethics Board administers a code of ethics for state public officials and regulates lobbyists and their employers.

This introduction illustrates how state government both benefits and regulates dozens of aspects of life in Wisconsin. The following sections describe in detail the agencies that make up the executive branch of state government and the numerous services they perform each day.

Agency Responsibility: As the state's chief executive, the governor represents all the people and is responsible for safeguarding the public interest. The constitution sets certain limits on the governor's powers, but the increased size and complexity of state government have given the governor's office many more responsibilities than it originally had.

Although various administrators direct the day-to-day operations of state agencies, the governor is considered the head of the executive branch. For the most part, the individuals, commissions and part-time boards that head the major administrative departments are appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the governor, although the appointments may also require senate confirmation. Appointees to part-time boards often serve fixed terms of 2 to 6 years, but the governor's 4-year term of office permits the chief executive to name the majority of the board members over time. The governor is also responsible for appointing almost 1,200 members to various councils and boards that are created by law to advise and serve state government.

The statutes authorize the governor to create special advisory committees or task forces to conduct studies and make recommendations. These committees frequently attract experienced citizens from many fields who are willing to donate their time and expertise as a public service.

The governor gives policy direction to the state and plays an important role in the legislative process by developing the executive budget and by advocating major policy changes in the state of the state message and other special messages to the legislature. Through the biennial budget, developed and administrated in conjunction with the Department of Administration and various agency heads, the governor ultimately reviews and directs the activities of all administrative agencies.

The governor has a number of specialized powers related to the legislative process. The chief executive may call a special legislative session to deal with specific legislation, may veto an entire bill, or may veto parts of appropriation measures. In the case of either whole or partial vetoes, a two-thirds vote of the members present in each house of the legislature is required to override the governor's action.

If a vacancy occurs in the state senate or assembly, state law directs the governor to call a special election. In the case of vacancies in elective county offices and judicial positions, the governor may appoint persons to serve unexpired terms or until a successor can be elected. The governor may dismiss sheriffs, district attorneys, coroners, or registers of deeds for proven malfeasance.

As the state's chief administrative officer, the governor must approve federal aid expenditures, state land purchases, highway and airport construction, land or building leases for state use, and many other state contracts, including compacts negotiated with Indian gaming authorities. The governor may request the attorney general to protect the public interest in various legal actions.

The governor serves as commander in chief of the Wisconsin National Guard when it is called into state service during emergencies, such as natural disasters and civil disturbances. (When National Guard units perform national service, as in the Persian Gulf, they are under command of the U.S. President.)

The chief executive has sole power to extradite a person charged with a criminal offense and to exercise executive clemency by granting a pardon, reprieve or sentence commutation to a convicted criminal offender. The nonstatutory Pardon Advisory Board was created in 1980 to expedite the pardon process. The board reviews applications for executive clemency and makes recommendations to the governor.

The governor (or governor's designee) serves as an ex officio member of several boards and commissions, including the State of Wisconsin Building Commission, Educational Communications Board, Disability Board, and State Council on Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse.

History: Before Wisconsin entered the Union, the U.S. President appointed the territorial governor, but the state constitution, adopted in 1848, gave executive powers to an elected governor. Debate during the constitutional conventions revealed reluctance to change the duties traditionally performed by the chief executive. Questions regarding the post of governor concerned amount of salary, duration of term, location of residence and, above all, veto power. An effort to divest the governor of veto power failed, as did attempts to vest pardoning power in the legislature and to deny the governor power to remove county officials from office for cause.

There have been several constitutional amendments adopted over the years affecting the authority of the governor. A 1967 amendment lengthened the governor's term from 2 years to 4, effective 1971. A constitutional amendment, ratified in 1930, empowered the governor to approve appropriation bills in part, thereby creating the partial veto. Another amendment, ratified in 1990, restricted the partial veto power by forbidding the governor to create new words by striking individual letters within words.

The Higher Educational Aids Council is responsible for the management and oversight of the state's student financial aid system for Wisconsin residents attending institutions of higher education. It also may enter into interstate agreements, such as remission of nonresident tuition and student loan collection programs. The council's executive secretary is appointed by the governor.

The council establishes policies to administer the state's student financial aid programs, including academic excellence scholarships, tuition grants, Wisconsin higher education grants, talent incentive grants, handicapped students grants, Indian student assistance, minority student grants (private sector and Technical College System), interstate reciprocity, and teacher and nursing forgiveness loans. It also administers the contracts for dental education services and the Wisconsin Health Education Loan Program and approves the list of students for the Medical College of Wisconsin, Inc., per capita grant program.

The Higher Educational Aids Council originated as the State Commission for Academic Facilities. It was created by Chapter 573, Laws of 1963, to administer Title I of the Federal Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963 which funded grants for university and college building programs in Wisconsin. Chapter 264, Laws of 1965, gave the commission student financial aid responsibilities and changed its name to the State Commission for Higher Educational Aids. Chapter 75, Laws of 1967, renamed it the Higher Educational Aids Board. In 1967 (Chapter 313), the council was authorized to organize the Wisconsin Higher Education Corporation to administer the federal Guaranteed Student Loan Program. As permitted by Chapter 313, the corporation was separated from the council in 1984 and given an independent board of directors as a private non-stock corporation organized under Chapter 181, Wisconsin Statutes. 1995 Wisconsin Act 27 repealed the Higher Educational Aids Board and transferred its responsibilities to the newly created Department of Education and Education Commission. The Wisconsin Supreme Court, in Thompson v. Crancy, 199 Wis. 2nd 674, held the establishment of the Department of Education and the Educational Commission unconstitutional but did not address the transfer of responsibilities of the Higher Educational Aids Board. Governor Thompson established the Higher Educational Aids Council in Executive Order 283, as amended by Executive Order 287, to carry out the functions formerly assigned to the board.

The Medical College of Wisconsin, Inc., is a private nonprofit educational corporation located in Milwaukee. The college receives a specified sum under the "student capitation" program for each Wisconsin resident it enrolls. The Higher Educational Aids Board determines whether applicants qualify as state residents, and a statutory formula sets a ceiling on the number of students supported. The college also receives state funds for its family practice residency program and the Area Health Education Centers health professionals training program.

The governor appoints one-third of the college's Board of Trustees for 6-year terms. The college is required to fulfill certain reporting requirements, and the Legislative Audit Bureau conducts biennial postaudits of expenditures made under state appropriations.

The college was separated from Marquette University in September 1967 as the Marquette School of Medicine, Inc. To increase the supply of physicians in Wisconsin, the legislature enacted Chapter 3, Laws of 1969, which appropriated funds to the school provided Wisconsin residents received first preference for admission. The legislature made a token appropriation to test the law's constitutionality, and the Wisconsin Supreme Court ruled the law constitutional in State ex rel. Warren v. Rueter, 44 Wis. 2d 201 (1969). Chapter 185, Laws of 1969, fully funded state support for the school. In 1970, the Board of Trustees changed the name of the school to the Medical College of Wisconsin, Inc.

GOVERNOR'S SPECIAL COMMITTEES

June 30, 1997

The committees described in this section were created or recreated by Governor Tommy G. Thompson under Section 14.019, Wisconsin Statutes, which provides that "the governor may, by executive order, create nonstatutory committees in such number and with such membership as desired, to conduct such studies and to advise the governor in such matters as directed." Committee members serve at the pleasure of the governor.

Unless terminated sooner, a special committee expires automatically on the fourth Monday of January of the year in which a new gubernatorial term begins. The governor may, however, provide for its continued existence by executive order. In that event, existing members continue to serve unless they resign or until they are replaced by the governor. Some of the following committees date back more than 30 years.

The law also provides that an employe of the Office of the Governor or of the Department of Administration be designated by the governor to coordinate the activities of the nonstatutory committees. In some cases, the governor has ordered other state agencies to staff and financially support committees.

When a new gubernatorial term begins, each committee is required to submit a final report to the governor or governor-elect prior to the new term. Copies of each final report and any other report prepared by a special committee are submitted to the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, the Legislative Reference Bureau, and the Reference and Loan Library in the Department of Public Instruction.

Section 20.505 (3) (a) of the Wisconsin Statutes provides for the expenses of special and executive committees created by law or executive order. In addition, certain committees receive specific state appropriations, and some receive federal grants because they are set up in response to federal program requirements.

The special committees are listed in alphabetical order by the key word in each committee name.

*Nominated by the governor and appointed with the advice and consent of the senate. Senate confirmation is required for secretaries of departments, members of commissions and commissioners, governing boards, examining boards, and other boards as designated by statute.

¹List includes only appointments made by the governor. Additional members frequently serve ex officio or are appointed by other means. The governor also appoints members of intrastate regional agencies and nonstatutory committees, and makes temporary appointments under statute Chapter 17 to elected state and county offices when vacancies occur. For complete membership list of unit, including officers, see description of agency in which it is located. Section numbers under each entry refer to statute sections authorizing appointment by the governor. Statute Section 21.18 provides for the governor's military staff.

²Home address is the area from which the officer was appointed to a full-time office and is the current address of part-time officials.

³Terms are specified by the following statute sections, or as otherwise provided by law: Sec. 15.05 (1) – secretaries; Sec. 15.06 (1) – commissioners; Sec. 15.07 (1) – governing boards and attached boards; Sec. 15.08 (1) – examining boards and councils; Sec. 15.09 (1) – councils.

⁴Members of boards and councils are reimbursed for their actual and necessary expenses incurred in performing their duties. In addition, examining board members receive $25 per day for days worked, and members of certain other boards, under statute Section 15.07 (5), receive a per diem as noted in the table. Statute Section 20.923 places state officials in one of 10 executive salary groups for which salary ranges have been established. Group salary ranges, as ratified by the Joint Committee on Employment Relations in the Compensation Plan 1995-97 for FY 1996-97, are: Group 1: $43,084-$64,342; Group 2: $46,389-$69,768; Group 3: $49,945-$82,065; Group 4: $53,772-$82,065; Group 5: $57,894-$89,016; Group 6: $62,331-$96,572; Group 7: $67,113-$103,966; Group 8: $72,259-$111,925; Group 9: $77,805-$120,494; Group 10: $83,766-$129,721.

⁵Nominated by governor but not yet confirmed by senate.

Agency Responsibility: The lieutenant governor is the state's second-ranking executive officer, a position comparable on the state level to that of the Vice President of the United States. If the incumbent governor dies, resigns or is removed from office, the lieutenant governor becomes governor for the unexpired term. Prior to a constitutional amendment in April 1979, the lieutenant governor was considered only "acting governor" in those circumstances. The lieutenant governor does serve as acting governor when the governor is temporarily unable to perform the duties of the office due to impeachment, incapacitation or absence from the state.

The governor may designate the lieutenant governor to represent the governor's office on any statutory board, commission or committee on which the governor is entitled to membership. Under such designation, the lieutenant governor has all the authority and responsibility granted by law to the governor. The governor may also designate the lieutenant governor to represent the chief executive's office on any nonstatutory committee or intergovernmental body created to maintain relationships with federal, state, and local governments or regional agencies. The lieutenant governor participates in national organizations of lieutenant governors and may be asked by the governor to coordinate specific state services and programs.

Organization: From 1848 until 1970, the lieutenant governor was elected for a 2-year term on a separate ballot in the November general election of even-numbered years. Since 1970, following amendment of the Wisconsin Constitution, voters have elected the governor and lieutenant governor on a joint ballot to a 4-year term. Candidates are nominated independently in the September primary, but voters cast a single ballot for the 2 offices in the November election.

History: The Territory of Wisconsin had no lieutenant governor, but the secretary of the territory was authorized to act as governor in the event of the governor's death or absence. The Wisconsin Constitution of 1848 provided for the post of lieutenant governor after considerable debate. Some delegates to the convention argued that the president of the senate, chosen from the membership of that body, should succeed the governor, with the secretary of state second in line of succession. However, the delegates who objected to a person's becoming governor without being elected on a statewide basis prevailed, and the post of lieutenant governor was reinstated in the constitution.

Originally, the lieutenant governor was also the president of the senate and could cast a deciding vote in case of a tie. In 1979, the voters ratified a constitutional amendment enabling the senate to choose its own presiding officer from among its members beginning in 1981.

Among Wisconsin's many tourist attractions is the Mid-Continent Railway Museum, where youngsters of the Space Age can experience the thrill of by-gone days when steam was king. Here Number 9 crosses Seely Creek on its "Snow Train" run. (Wisconsin Department of Tourism)
