We Have A Lot to Give Thanks For in 2020

When we think of Thanksgiving images of hot turkey, mashed potatoes and a table full of our loved ones comes to mind. While this year may look different for some families, the sentiment of giving thanks is the same and this year we should remember to give thanks for what we have and who we have around us.

Typically there would be parades held to celebrate Thanksgiving, however, our current pandemic has put a halt on many of our celebrations and events. One thing that we can do however, is to shop small and local. Our small town mom and pop shops are important to our local economy and have unfortunately suffered throughout 2020. Remember, they have families that they go home to at night and support while also supporting our local programs and even some school events.

After the harvest season, it is a perfect time to celebrate with family, friends, and other members of the community to relax and spend quality time with one another. It's equally important to support our neighbors. If you have extra food or supplies consider donating them to a local food pantry or making a dish to share with those who might be stuck inside or are less fortunate. Thanksgiving is a wonderful time to welcome and mentor new people into our lives.

Wisconsinites celebrate a number of other traditions on every other day of the year as well including a Friday night fish fry, getting some cheese curds at a local fair, or cheering on the Green Bay Packers. But one thing that unites all of us, is a love for food and family.

As always, feel free to contact my office with questions, comments, or concerns.
