saw that the redistricting process is continuing with maps circulating. I'd bet a month's salary that whoever is assessing the partisan implications is looking at a simple result — most likely the presidential result — but there are a lot of problems with using this method, not least of which is that most wards haven't even been finished yet, and there are far more sophisticated methods.

Short story — if you'd like some help with this, let me know. There's a lot I could show them.
