Tax Freedom Day In Wisconsin

(Madison, WI) – Tomorrow marks Tax Freedom Day for Wisconsin’s hardworking families and businesses, which is the day when taxpayers in our state have earned enough money to pay their local, state and federal taxes for the year. Governor Scott Walker and members of the state legislature have done a great job of getting Wisconsin back on track the past 4 years, but State Senator Leah Vukmir (R-Wauwatosa) says there is still much work to be done.

“Even with all the recent tax cuts, our state currently observes the 14th latest Tax Freedom Day. The overall tax burden in Wisconsin remains too high. As we consider the state budget for the next biennium, I remain committed to lowering the overall tax burden in Wisconsin by ensuring that state government operates as efficiently and effectively as possible,” said Senator Vukmir.

“I look forward to working diligently with my colleagues in the legislature and Governor Walker to ensure that we do everything we can to deliver real tax relief to the hard working people of Wisconsin. Our goal is to continue moving Wisconsin toward being one of the earliest states in the country to celebrate Tax Freedom Day.”

The National Tax Freedom Day is today, one day earlier than Wisconsin’s Tax Freedom Day.
